This hat is designed for matrons or older women who prefer a toque to a bonnet.

It is a simple matter to test crape and other fabrics designed especially for mourning wear to see that they are waterproof.. Immerse a small piece in a glass of water before purchasing. If the dye runs and the "rib" or crimble, comes out, the fabric has not been waterproofed and should be immediately

Crape may be easily renovated and freshened to look like new. A veil which has grown limp and dusty looking, should be thoroughly brushed and shaken, removing the dust. It should then be rolled about a broom handle (without stretching) and pinned so that it will stay rolled. Place the rolled crape over a boiler and keep it there an hour if necessary, until it has become thoroughly steamed through with the steam from boiling water. Set it to dry and allow it to remain on the roller for 24 hours. The result will be entirely satisfactory, the crape look-

Cluny Neckwear.

Neckwear is prominently favoring Cluny. Round collars and small sailor collars of real Cluny are in demand for wear in the new one piece dresses of satin, serge, etc., that close down the front, and fichus and large collars are lavishly trimmed with this lace.

Orris Root in Powder Box. When using orris-root for cleaning the hair, it is very convenient to put it into an empty powder-box, from which it can be easily shaken onto the hair, instead of being continually spilled from the paper package or receptacle.-Suburban Life.

A Good Hint.

In an emergency, where one has to evolve a "fancy" costume with little time and apparently less material, something very lovely can be made of several of the beautiful evening scarfs, either the spangled ones or plain ones. Nearly every woman will possess a scarf of one kind or another and these can be borrowed, as no damage need be done to them. Over a white dress hang two or more of the silver-spangled ones, so that they fall from the shoulders down as far as possible on either side. Then wind others about the hips and around the head, crossing a piece over the forehead and another over the chin and lower part of the face. The eastern effect is graceful and usually very becoming.

White Feit Hats.

Although every one may not accept the fashion for white felt hats in hot weather, it is probable that they will be the first choice as soon as the cool med, with a bow of black velvet or taffeta ribbon.

One should not attempt to put anything ornate on them, although it is probable we shall see them trimmed in morning glories, in cherries, in olums, and in small red apples.

87 OTTAWA AVENUE

In Present Stage It Is Thing of Beauty and Joy of the Season.

There is no end to the variety of form and color assumed by the ever increasingly popular empire bag. In its present stage it is a thing of beauty and a joy of the season, though, being a child of Dame Fashion, it cannot be a joy forever.

You have no idea how much money can be centered on the development of these handsome and thoroughly charming envelopes. Costly gilt ornaments are seen on many of the more elaborate ones, some of which are made entirely of gold, silver, copper or steel colored lace. Semi-precious stones are used to carry out a flower pattern or to highten the effect of conventional designs. Inside are trappings of silver, gold or ivory, tiny vanity cases, mirrors, powder puffs, lip pencils and the like.

Another idea that has caught the fancy of the woman who counts not cost, is an empire bag of brocade, either velvet or satin, to match her hat or its trimmings. Usually this hat is one of the small bonnetlike models edged with bands of fur, such as moleskin, Persian lamb, chinchilla or ermine. A band of the fur outlines the bag and the flap, which buttons over envelope fashion. Of course, the plainest of autumn suits would assume a smart tone when worn with such ultra fashionable foibles.

Bags of broadcloth of the same material as the suit have deep chenille fringes around the sides and bottoms, and correspondingly plain mountings of gun metal, old gold or frosted silver.

Any odd piece of silk or velvet picked up on the remnant counter may be transformed into a strikingly handsome empire bag in an afternoon. And there is a splendid chance for a display or individuality.

Favorite Dishes.

A woman who enjoys having friends to lunch or dinner has the happy faculty of hitting on just the things her guests enjoy eating. For some years she has made it a point to jot down the favorite dishes of this friend or that in a tiny note book in her desk. When her cousin Molly is coming to lunch she looks up her name, and there finds recorded that the aforesaid Molly is particularly fond of custard desserts of any kind; clam is her favorite soup, and in meats she dotes on anything cooked en casserole. With these hints spread before her the matter of planning a meal is considerably simpli-

Cleaning Black Silk.

One of the cleaning processes for black silk that is far from being widely known is the coffee method. It is as follows: Boil some coffee until there is no further aroma rising therefrom. Lay the silk article that is to be sponged on a table or board and sponge on the side that is to show. After the sponging is thoroughly done turn on the wrong side and iron with fairly hot iron, preferably one that is kept at a constant heat such as the gas or electric iron variety, though the other will do if rapid changes are made and those changes are as often as necessary, say, minute intervals. This will remove the spots far oftener than the malt liquor process that has long been the fashion, and not only will this give tone to the black materials but make the article's texture appear new. Let dry slightly before ironing.

How to Keep Young.

Some women attain a graceful old age by adopting the following rules: Forget disagreeable things, keep your nerves well in hand and inflict them on no one; master the art of saying pleasant things; do not expect too The new season has opened up with | much from your friends; make whatever work that comes to you congenial; retain your illusions and don't believe all the world wicked and unkind; relieve the miserable and sympathize with the sorrowful. RIBBONS AND SILK VERY MUCH IN EVIDENCE.

Add the Rich Color With Which Fash-Ion Decrees Woman Shall Face the Frost-No End in Variety.

The strong, rich colors with which rich Chinese or other oriental emfashion decrees we shall face the frost of winter, show to great advantage in splendid ribbons of brocade in satin or satin and velvet. Some of these ribbons are further enriched with gold or silver threads, but in design and weave and colorings there is really no end in vanity. It is the day of fancy ribbons and no elaboration is too intricate for the manufacturer. Wide ribbons are used and fancy piece silk for handsome bows which provide the only decoration needed on the smaller hats for fall. Naturally these bows are full, but simply made, in keeping with the quality and elaboration of the fabrics used. An ordinary bow requires from two to three yards. In very heavy ribbons, rosette bows are made by a group of ends instead of loops, as shown in the picture given here. These ribbons are not inexpensive, ranging in price from about fifty cents to three or four dollars a yard. But they furnish a charming and ample trimming so that one may dispense with feathers and ornaments,

ABOUT THE SEASON'S SLEEVE

Styles Are Many and Varied, But All Are Something on Peasant Order.

Whether the kimona sleeve will hold its own this winter, time alone will tell. Paris herself has not decided and while many and varied styles of sleeves are shown in the new designs, they are all something on the peasant order. One important house shows sleeves cut on kimona lines, but separate from the bodice. The advantage of this is evident in the increased comfort of the blouse.

A Helpful Hint.

Bamboo canes make excellent stair rods-just ordinary canes costing one penny each. Cut these the required ength and enamel them to match the carpet. Not only do they make cheap rods, but they do not require constant polishing, as the brass ones do, and the housewife knows how much time this will save in the keeping of her hall and stair. The bamboo rods are as durable as they are cheap, but they look much better enameled than left the natural color, which soils quickly and is difficult to clean.

English blazers fairly scream at one from the shop windows. The spectrum seems to have been searched for brilliant shades to contribute to their brilliancy. White with robin's egg blue stripes an inch in width, blue with hunter's green and any other color or combination of colors guaranteed to momentarily blind the eyes are being sought.

Hairdressing Styles.

The ringlet styles of the sixties, the fashions of the grandmothers of this day and age, are now the leading effect in hairdressing, says the Drygoods Economist. In place of the pompadour the French , hair dresser today sells the false from parted at the left side, either waved or with ringlets; for the back switch for coiling, a curly knot or one c the new fashioned calottes, with selstrands of wavy hair to be arranged in swirls, is used. All hairdressing tends to make the head appear small and ornaments usually take the forn of ornamental bands. Many of these are worn very low on the forehead dragging the hair to the temples and crushing the curls down about the ears. EXCEL IN GRACE.

Smaller Sizes Have Their Admirers, but the Larger Shapes More Than Hold Their Own With Followers of Fashion.

However much we may admire the quaint, small bonnet-like shapes, some demure and some jaunty, which are now fashionable, and however interesting the unending variety and eccentric novelty of medium sized and small hats may prove, still the most beautiful of all is the large picture hat. It belongs to youth and perves as a background against which the beauty of youthful coloring and contour is emphasized. It subtracts years from the woman who has preserved her good looks into middle life and carries a suggestion of girlhood always. It is the hat of great occasions, and it is never out of style.

The contour of the picture shapes varies somewhat from season to season, the poise changes a little, but it is in the matter of trimming that the hat is brought into the mode of the moment. Just at present malines are greatly liked, mounted over crowns either in masses of drapery, in shirrings, or standing puffs. Occasionally maline is folded in several thicknesses and doubled into long-pointed triangles, mounted in rows about dome crowns. They resemble most dainty gauze wings, like those of a butterfly. The effects from posing one color over two others, all beautiful, giving changing opal like tints. The favorite method of using maline is the arrangement of many standing puffs springing from the top of the crown. The ostrich plume and the picture hat have so long been associated in our minds that it almost goes without saying that this combination is a favorite. Large shapes and plumes belong to one another. The hats in all black and in black with white feathus the gauntlet sleeve. This is cut PICTURE VARIETY CONCEDED TO ers, are the handsomest of this chartume is far easier to make than a coat suit, and there is one style at present much exploited in the shops which might well appeal to home sewers. This is the dress of one-piece effect showing a little bodice with a plaited tail and puffings for trimmings. With it goes the snuggest sort of a short skirt, decked like the waist with puff bands, and sometimes holding two funny little shirred pockets on the front panel. In a dark silk, with the usual white touches on the bodice, this frock has a most practical value, for while suited to general service it can be made very smart with a dressy hat, dainty shoes and other proper accessories. It is the fad to carry huge envelope bags with these dresses, when Striped zephyrs makes up very well may add to the quaintness of her apin this style. A double-faced satin or silk could be used for this style, with the puffings made up on the facing side; but It is far more usual to have all one color and one material and the effect is far better than when the trimming contrasts. Any soft wool, such as cashmere or veiling or marquisette, is adapted to the style, but although a very light and pliable cloth may also be used a thinner texture gives a better look. In fact, silk and satin are par excellence the materials for the graceful and youthful model.

The surplice bodice styles and tanic skirts also recommend themselves to domestic sewers, for draped effects are far less difficult to accomplish frocks into one.

SMART WRAPS FOR THE FALL

Many and Varied Are the Varieties Seen From Heavy Polo to Dainty Jacket.

Nowadays the wrap is the thing for coat of some sort is worn on almost every occasion, and many and varied are the varieties seen from the heavy polo coat worn last season and the gay-striped blazer to the dainty little jacket of silk worn over the lingerie frock. Thus it behooves the woman who must count the pennies if she wishes to be well dressed to look out for fashions which may be made at home, for so great a number of wraps come high.

One little mantle for evenings which seems to be designed especialy for this very woman was seen the other day. It was a graceful affair of broadcloth cut on the inevitable kimono lines with little or no slepe to the side seams, making the coat hang straight and loose, the sleeves were short and the front of the coat was several inches longer than the back. The entire coat was finished in marabou, this furnishing the only trimming, a lining of inexpensive silk made the wrap slip off and on easily while tassels formed the fastenings at the bust line.

Making a Pillow Cover Fit.

The cover of a sofa pillow can be made to fit well by the following little trick: After sewing up three sides but before turning the cover right side out, tack the two finished corners of the case securely to two corners of the pillow. Turn the case over the pillow. Sew up the fourth side for an inch or two at each end. Tack these two corners to the corresponding corners of the cushion. Finish as usual. This keeps the pillow from pulling and sagging away from the cover .-

In any event an examination should be made, and if lice are present they should be gone after hammer and tongs, which should include not only treatment for the poultry, but a fumigating and whitewashing of the poultry quarters.

Inasmuch as it seems to be the inborn tendency of the hog to seek and get into all the dirt and filth it has access to, it is the part of good management to make its quarters and surroundings as clean and sanitary as cornhusk signs and goosebone kinks, possible. When a disease breaks out in a herd of swine the number of germs is quite apt to be in direct proportion to the filth present.

> There are three practices followed by many families that have been outlawed by modern views of sanitation and which are without question responsible for more dumpy spells and doctor's bills than any others in the whole category of offenses against the laws of health. They are keeping bedroom windows closed during the night hours to promote warmth, the burning of kerosene lamps turned low during the same hours and the banking up of the house with ill smelling manure from the barnyard. Any one of the three practices is bad enough, but when all three are combined it makes a pretty stiff combination.

The fellows on the usually low and wet land who in wet years past have done a heavy business in mosquitoes, bullfrogs and pitchfork burrs, have been in clover during the past two seasons and have already harvested bumper crops of small grain and will soon gather big yields of corn. The owners of this low land-almost invariably rich and fertile-should more fully appreciate that the tilling of this land will in the main have the same result in making it productive that these two dry seasons have done, and that the sooner they get it tilled the sooner will they cease to be the helpless victims of wet seasons and be able to raise bumper crops on it every year.

The commission men are at their same stale old tricks this year-namely, reporting an oversupply of fall and winter apples and thus "bearing" the market. They will likely continue on in this line until the fruit is pretty much out of the growers' hands, when given an electric shock. There is little question that in the case of late summer and early fall apples there was an oversupply in some sections, but that there is more than half a crop of fruits have been flimflammed by commission men long enough, and it is just increase levied by middlemen, that the mayor and councilmen have many cases established city markets where truck gardeners can go with their fresh produce and where consumers can buy their supplies of fruits and vegetables. Under this market system growers not only get just as much for their stuff as they did before, but consumers are enabled to buy at prices from 20 to 40 per cent lower than they were prior to the establishment of the market. In Indianapolis the mayor took matters into his own hands and bought potatoes and sold them to consumers at cost to break a combination of commission men that had been levying an unjust tax on the people. If commission men suffer as a result of this new movement they have themselves to blame and no one else. The consuming public is willing that middlemen should receive a fair profit for handling produce, but when the prices of it are advanced outrageously by simply passing through their hands folks can hardly be expected to put up with the imposition. It would seem, therefore, up to the middlemen as a class business to a considerable extent.

"THE GOOD OLD TIMES."

Not a few elderly folks are wont still to refer occasionally to the "good | old times." In many ways they were good, for folks had, or, at least, took, a little more time to breathe and enjoy life's best things as they went along. Then, again, in some other respects the old times were not so good. An incident Illustrating this truth was narrated to the writer the other day by a friend who is near his seventieth to correct this abuse or be put out of year. He owed a rich money lender in his neighborhood a hundred dollars or more. To meet this obligation he decided to sell his hogs. He found the this fall. GREAT YEAR FOR JOHNSON.

Most Successful Season.

Considering the fact that he is a member of a team which finished next to last in the race which is now closed, Walter Johnson's record of twenty-six victories and twelve defeats is a splendid one. Bender, Gregg and Coombs are the only pitchers that have worked regularly this season who have a better standing among the pitchers than Johnson, and it is easily seen that he would probably be leading them all if he were a member of a winning aggregation.

This has been the most successful year in Johnson's career notwithstanding the fact that he got a miserable start, and it was not until late in the season that he began to pitch winning ball. That Johnson has changed his style of pitching is best indicated by the great falling off in the number of strikeouts he scored. Where he established a record with 313 strikeouts last season he is scarcely ever the 200 mark this year, and yet he has won more games this year than ever before.

George Sutton, the rotund Chicago billiard expert, may be held responsible for stimulating interest in billiards in a state bordering on lethargy for almost a year, or ever since the last

Sutton brought billiard lovers out of their inactivity by challenging Willie Hoppe, the marvelous champion, for his title of 18.2 balkline billiards and posted a forfeit as evidence of good faith. Hoppe speedily accepted the defi, and the match will probably be played the latter part of October.

A fad for fancy bags is developing at such a rate that we may expect it to become a furore by the time the holidays arrive. These bags have every claim to popularity and are a pleasing change from the leather bags which have been so universally worn for many years. They are made of all sorts of materials, especially millinery fabrics, and "a bag to match the hat" is the latest word from fashion centers.

The most brilliant embroideries. heavy laces, gold and silver nets, velvet, satin, silk and tapestries, fancy bands and braids, linen, hand embroidery and brocaded ribbons provide materials from which these bags are made. They vary in shape from perfeetly round to square. Nearly all of them are made on the model of an envelope and the flap fastens with a cord loop over a covered button. Gold and silver laces, nets and cord play a conspicuous part in their construction and the tarnished effects are more effective then the bright gold. These bags are not difficult to make. As holiday gifts they will without doubt be in excellent demand.

A foundation is cut from canvas or a heavy rice-net, and consists in the majority of cases of a single strip two and a half times as long as the fin-1shed bag. This foundation strip is covered with a thin sheet of wadding and with the materials with which the bag is to be covered and lined. Plain or figured taffeta or plain satin is the usual lining fabric. Small pockets are shirred or sewed on plain, on the lining. Allowing for the flap, the remainder of the covered strip is turned up to form the bag, and the sides slipstitched or machine stitched together. The flap is fastened down with a loop made of cord sewed to the flap. This slips over a button made by covering a button mold with a bit of the material used in the bag. On some bags clasps are used such as those that fasten gloves. All are suspended with silk or tinsel cords, which are long enough in nearly all cases to be worn over the shoulder. It is the fashion just now to knot the cord and carry the bag by it, in the hand.

Hand crocheted bags are very popular, also others made of heavy laces. They are lined with silk and suspended by crocheted cords finished with tassels. Crocheted balls decorate the bottoms of many of them. They are drawn up at the top with the cord.

Embroidered motifs, in silk of many brilliant colors, decorate velvet bags and cords are applied as a part of the decoration, in many cases. But the most popular of all decorations are those made of bands of tinsel with woven-in figures of colored silk.

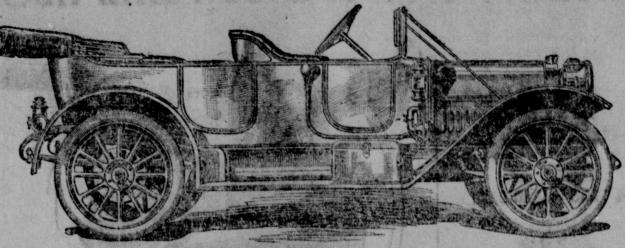

Tinsel or silk tassels, borders of fur, chenille and silk fringes and the fashionable trimming of small balls, all are requisitioned in the making of

WOMAN'S FOOT GROWS LARGER

Shoe Manufacturers Say Number Two Shoe Is Now Almost Obsolete.

Shoe manufacturers claim that the American woman's foot is growing larger. The number two shoe is almost obsolete, they say, and sizes four and five are much commoner than three. The explanation seems to be that the phenomenon is due to the increased use of the feminine foot as a means of locomotion. The constantly increasing number of women engaged in industry and the growth in popularity of tennis, golf and walking have had their inevitable result, and common sense has done much to abolish the wearing of pinching shoes. The tradition that small feet are an excellent thing in women has persisted long and will not die without struggle. Conservatives need not fear that women will carry this matter too far; they know when to stop. -Success Magazine.

Flames Discovered By Dewitt Dauntler When He Went to Barn This Morning.

A horse and delivery truck, the property of John Fellows, were destroyed in a fire which burned the John Wasley barn, near Highland avenue between First and Second streets at about 6 o'clock this morning the total loss of the conflagration being nearly $1500, which is partially covered by insurance. The by the carelessness of someone who had slept in the barn during the

The conflagration was discovered by Dewitt Dauntler, who is employed by Mr. Fellows, when he went to feed the horse, the barn being occupied by the bottling works proprietor. As he neared the structure, an loan of $8,000,000, but the American old frame building thoroughly dried out, he heard the horse kicking, and immediately noticed the bright light in the barn

IRALLY WEEK AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

FIVE MINISTERS WILL PREACH DIFFERENT NIGHTS OF THE WEEK.

Rally week at the Christian church opened with a large attendance at every service yesterday. In the evening a large delegation from Pine Creek surprised the minister by attending in a body. They lent inspiration to the service.

Rally services will be held each evening this week, except Saturday evening. Five preachers will speak on the five nights and each one will brink a message of hopefulness. Rev. Fisher will be the speaker tonight and Rev. J. Fred Jones, state secretary of the Illinois Christian Mission ary society, will speak tomorrow evening. No offering will be taken at any service.

The subject tonight is "Self-Discipline." There will be special music.

FAMILY THEATRE

The bill at the Family theatre the fore part of this week is a good one and will draw excellently.

The Georgia Trio will put on an act that will entertain old and young and there are three good reels of trip to the south.

Al Martin's Game, an Indian story will make a hit. Giving the High Sign, or the Woman Hater, is a laugh producer, sure-fire and the leader, The Belle of Justice, is one that the management feels sure will please Dixon people.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

The Princess theatre will show this evening some of the best pictures ever shown in town, combining a lot of excitement and pretty scenery. Grey Cloud's Devotion is a pretty Indian story with lots of mountain scenery and thrilling parts all the way through, Enlisted Man's Honor is a tremendous military hit. The picture is taken at Ft. Meyer with the 15th U. S cavalry playing the leading role. It is full of excitement and clever incidents. The last picture on the program is entitled The Burglar and the Girl, a good detective story with a strong plot.

University Training At Home

I wish to state that I am pursuing a course of instruction in the International Correspondence Schools and find the instructions received are very helpful. While my brother was attending the University of Illinois he was required to buy a number of the I C. S. lesson books which were regular ly used as class room text books with his course in Architectural Engineering. This would show that the text books are standard and one taking a home study course would receive the same instruction as in the University. 22 State Universities are buying I. C. S. Lesson Books.
